Marathon council session

City turns thumbs down on Long's steep road

PLEASANTON — The city council duplicated the planning commission's marathon, eight-hour session with Dr. Howard Long last month when it early Tuesday morning denied him permission to built a narrow, private road leading to 10 proposed, exclusive pstatps.

The estates — which Long's attorney, Gilbert Maines, said could sell for $250,000 — would be on the upper, 50-acre portion of Long's hillside subdivision.

Nine homes have already been built on the lower section of Longview.

The council's 4-0 decision to uphold the planning commission by denying Long a modification of city law came just before 3 a.m., after eight grueling hours of testimony by City Atty. Ken Scheidig, Maines and representatives of half a dozen city departments.

The session was particularly punishing for Mayor Ed Kinney, Councilwoman Joyce LeClaire, City Manager Bill Edgar and Scheidig, who were scheduled to meet with Citizens Against Redevelopment (CARD) at 8:30 a.m. Tuesday for a trip to Santa Clara to study redevelopment there.

Most members of city staff who attended the marathon meeting were at city hall by 9 a.m. Tuesday.

Although the matter had been boiled down to approval or denial of a private road, the issue was complicated and the resolution that denied Long's request was four pages long.

After the eight hours of testimony, Scheidig produced a resolution of denial that he had prepared in advance.

Councilman Bob Philcox moved to accept the resolution, was seconded by LeClaire and supported by Kinney and Mayor Pro Tem Bill Herlihy. Councilman Roger McLain was in Hawaii.

The reasons for denying a modification of city law that would have allowed Long a private road were:

•The design of the steep road did not provide guard rails, turnouts or ramps for runaway vehicles.

•The minimum 18-foot width of the road and its slope of 20 percent could not "safely accommodate two-way traffic," particularly since the road would be 1,700 feet long.

•The road would not have adequate drainage, and runoff from nearby hillsides would cause debris to pile up on it, creating a safety hazard.

•There was "no good, sufficient and adequate justification" for requiring property owners to maintain such a long, narrow road, which they must if it were private.

•There would be no benefit to the city from a private, rather than a public road.

The council, however, accepted a proposal by Philcox to form a committee representing the council, planning commission and city staff to meet with Long to iron out subdivision difficulties.

"It's an unusual suggestion, but it's an unusual plan," Philcox said of the subdivision. "It's our first hillside development and I don't think anyone would argue that it's in a mess."

He and other council members urged Long to submit a new map for the 50-acre subdivision, which has drawn criticism from city staff because four lots do not have access to the street and driveways are up to 1,000 feet long.

Long spoke only once during the lengthy session. He said, "Amen," when Maines commented near the end of his testimony: "They say you can't fight city hall, and I'm starting to believe it.

"We could be in court seven years at the rate we're going."

Later, Long, a family physician, accused Herlihy of slandering him. Presumably he was refering to Herlihy's comment: "I've seen many problems arise from projects this developer has been involved in."

Herlihy also said that grading had been done in the subdivision without a grading permit. "This piece of property is extremely difficult, if not impossible, to develop in accord with good safety standards," he said.

Long's proponnts have argued that a private deal had been made between city staff and developers to permit the narrow road. While no one at city hall has admitted a deal, the council indirectly addressed that issue.

"This type of evening is not the way cities should be run," said Kinney. "This is the culmination of a political, legal hill we've been climbing as a result of doing business on the back of envelopes.

Truck dump jams traffic

A Sand Transport System truck-trailer rig hauling gravel from the pits through Pleasanton lost its load at First Street and Vineyard Avenue shortly before 11 a.m. yesterday, bottling up traffic while truck drivers shoveled the cargo back into the bin. Drivers believe an air hose may have broken and released hooks that hold the gravel bin to the truck's bed. When the driver stopped for the signal the bin slid forward and left its load on First Street Traffic was snarled for more than an hour while a heavy duty tow truck was called to lift the bin into place. The Cities of Pleasanton and Livermore have complained recently and vociferously about trucks using central Pleasanton for freeway access in lieu of a private road connecting Stanley Boulevard and the El Charro Road interchange. The interchange was built with federal and state funds, but, they claim, Alameda County has not lived up to a promise to complete a public road linking it with Stanley Boulevard. Rhodes-Jamieson and Kaiser Sand and Gravel built private access roads not open to the general public or other gravel firms. No one was hurt in the mid-day mishap.

Businessmen focus on plan

Redevelopment faces test

Pleasanton's multi-million-dollar redevelopment venture faces a crucial test on Tuesday when the city's business sector registers its vote on that controversial plan.

Faced with persistent opposition from home owners and even some business interests throughout the core area, the city's leadership is counting on a strong vote of confidence from the chamber membership in order to keep that program alive.

"We helped launch this plan, and it is the best thing for downtown revitalization that we have," the chamber president has stated. Ben Fernandez also makes it clear that his own vote will be in support of the redevelopment district. That decision is due to be made by the city council in early November.

The chamber tried for a consensus of its 200 members at a luncheon gathering last week. But the response to that session was "disappointingly small" and just 15 members took part in balloting to postpone any decision to a September 23 noon meeting.

Bernard Gerton, former mayor of the city and a downtown property owner, has lead the fight against the $20 million redevelopment venture, contending that "it is bad for Pleasanton, and bad for the downtown area," Gerton has indicated however that he might support a considerably revised redevelopment plan, one that would be governed by an appointed commission rather than under the city council's direct control.

The chamber's resolution, to be voted on next Tuesday, includes one important condition that might not win the council's approval. "That the redevelopment plan currently before the city council be approved and supported on the condition that the city council prepare a list of priorities with revitalization of the central business district at the top thereof." The resolution would accept the council as the redevelopment agency, adding that "a review of the priority list" be conducted "no less frequently than every five years "

There has been pressure from other parts of the community to make a $4 million interchange at W. Las Positas and I-680 as the first priority item within that program. Failure of the chamber to agree with the council on the question of priorities could further divide the business sector's support, and that might be the final blow for a venture that has gained no other large bloc of support outside of city hall.

At sewage services meet

Hyde-Miller rekindling?

The Hyde vs. Miller debate may get another airing tonight when the Bay Area Sewage Services Agency (BASSA) meets at the Hotel Claremont in Berkely.

Ronald D. Hyde, who is both a member of the Valley Community Services District board of directors, and a trustee on the BASSA board, has taken exception to remarks by Livermore council member Don Miller, and with which the former Livermore mayor put down the Bay agency.

Letters from the two valley officials will be "noted and filed" at the 7:30 p.m. BASSA session, although some further verbal comment on the question of BASSA's true function seems likely.

The BASSA board will also ponder its own future in the light of new state legislation which is aimed at removing most of those Bay agencies, to be replaced by one super panel.

As now empowered by state law, BASSA has control over all waste treatment systems in the Bay Area, including veto power over any planned sewage systems, like the one Pleasanton has been considering to replace its outmoded plant on Sunol Boulevard. Hyde is the valley representative on the BASSA board of directors.

Amador trustees bend on busing services to serve Silvergate

Amador Valley High School District trustees were confronted last night by a mass of vehement Silvergate residents urging immediate reinstatement of school bus service between that area and Dublin High School.

Spurred on by the organization of George and Brenda Nicholson and a petition signed by more than 400, Silvergate parents gained assurances of district action. This comes in the wake of a district budget priority committee recommendation that $90,000 available from Senate Bill 220 be allotted first to individual schools, including supplies, equipment and books.

Doug Rose, assistant superintendent for fiscal services, told the large audience at Foothill High School that it would cost between $5,000 and $6,000 to reinstitute service for the approximately 175 high school aged students in Silvergate. Reinstatement of bus service had not been included on the priority list for expenditures of additional monies made available through passage of Senator Albert Rodda's bill.

Protest leaders had indicated before the meeting they would seek further redress if their request for full service was not honored.

Residents speaking Tuesday night admonished the board for alleged expenditure of "tens of thousands of school dollars for field trip busing" and "tens of thousands on travel, conference and other unexplained expenses for administration and board members."

Though presented with a one-bus reinstatement of service, Nicholson had said earlier "we need two school buses which stop at the corner of Peppertree Road and Silvergate Drive and at the corner of Peppertree and Shannon in the morning and afternoon. Do not compromise for morning service only," Nicholson concluded.

Partial reinstatement of bus service to Silvergate would follow the pattern set by Pleasanton Elementary School District trustees earlier this month when they added a stop for home-bound students from Alisal, as well as a stop for students in the Vintage Hills area.

The petition presented to the board by Stan and Maxine Swihart noted that parents were concerned about students having to walk along roadways and for distances up to two and a half miles.

Residents, led by the Nicholsons, previously had submitted draft legislation to Assemblyman Floyd Mori called for revised minimum and maximum walking distances for all school children in the state. The proposal, which could cost up to $20 million if approved and implemented, has already been scanned by members of the Assembly Education Committee.

Trustees last night indicated the Silvergate busing decision could be in effect by next week.

Official opening tonight

Zone 7 to meet at new plant

Zone 7 directors will meet for the first time in the long awaited Del Valle water treatment plant at tonight's meeting.

The plant, which has been feeding a trickle of treated water to the valley's west end for the past month, will open officially when directors man the controls of the multi-million dollar facility.

Perched on a golden bluff in the rolling hills just south of Livermore, the building houses the directors' first permanent chambers. Until now the board has met alternately in the Livermore and Pleasanton court houses.

Nine million gallons of treated water per day will flow through 54 inch pipes to bring California Aqueduct water west valley residents.

Local retailers — the Cities of Pleasanton and Livermore and Valley Community Services District (VCSD) — will buy the treated water from the zone, mix it with local well water and serve it to residents.

The increase in available treated water will allow retailers to blend in a lower amount of harder local well water. Hence completion of the plant should mean softer water for local consumers.

Directors also will hear a committee report on the Congress of Valley Agencies (COVA) and consider the newly revised by-laws.

Pleasanton first modified then approved by-laws which will allow any steering committee member — Pleasanton, Livermore, VCSD or Zone 7 — to veto the study of any project within that agency's area.

The controversy arose when Pleasanton first volunteered then rescinded an offer for COVA to review the city's proposed regional shopping center.

Livermore's City Council narrowly passed the by-laws with a three to two vote at its last meeting.

Pleasanton's controversial redevelopment plan will rear its head when directors hear Alameda County Counsel Kelvin Booty's legal opinion on the propriety of the measure.

Zone 7 Directors have balked at the loss of tax funds inherent in the city's plans and ordered counsel to examine the legality of the redevelopment project.

Directors specifically questioned the inclusion of an "undeveloped" area — the regional shopping center land — in a "redevelopment" plan.

Concerned over possible pollution of the underground water table, directors earlier ordered a report on the impact to the table of Kaiser Sand and Gravel's proposed land reclamation plan — garbage fill — on the city's eastern edge.

That report, too, will be presented at the 8 p.m. meeting.

The new plant's entrance is located at the intersection of Vineyard Avenue and E. Vallecitos Road, just beyond the Holmes Street — Wetmore Road "Y."

Super-chefs at work

Sid Leon, Tony Macchiano and Gene O'Brien are no doubt excellent chefs around the kitchen range and with the backyard barbecue, but if they can baste that can with soft drink "sauce", they've really got something. Gene is general chairman of the Pleasanton Heritage Days barbecue scheduled Saturday, Oct. 11 from 6 to 10 p.m. Tickets for the barbecue are $5 for adults and $2.50 for children. The meal will include a 12 ounce steak, french bread, salad, and baked beans. Each barbecue ticket will have a stub good for $1 off on a large pizza at Gay Nineties Pizza Parlor in Pleasanton. The grand prize winner of the Bicentennial Vacation will be drawn at the barbecue. Tickets are on sale at the chamber offices, 10 Neal St., and at merchants throughout the community. The barbecue and program are scheduled for the Fairgrounds. (Times Photo)

Conway claim may be denied

LIVERMORE — Livermore Area Recreation and Park District (LARPD) trustees are expected to deny a $5 million claim for damages when they meet in special session tonight.

The claim was filed by the family of Jon Conaway, the 9-year-old who nearly drowned in a June accident at May Nissen School, and who remains in a coma. Such claims are routinely denied by public agencies and then settled through lawyers.

Board members will also be discussing a water management study proposed by the Army Corps of Engineers.

They are expected to approve an agreement for architectural services for the restoration of Ravenswood, a Victorian estate south of town which will become a community park and historical landmark.

A claim for personal injuries for Lawrence Cabanel will also be denied and board members are expected to approve specifications for resurfacing of May Nissen and Recreation Center tennis courts.

LARPD board will call for bids to resurface these tennis courts at the Rec Center as well as the May Nissen courts on Rincon Avenue. (Times photo)

'Rhythm, Sound and Symbol offered in rec program

Alfred Haldeen and the Valley Community Services District are offering a unique music appreciation course called "Rhythm, Sound and Symbol" to youngsters six years old and up.

The 10-week course is designed to teach children to feel a rhythm, rather than count it by rote; to be able to sing a melody on sight; and to be able to listen to a song and learn to play and harmonize with it.

A background in music is unnecessary, according to Haldeen, and the "positive, creative orientation plus a compilation of early effective solutions to the worst and most common music student difficulties provide a foundation and perspective for future musical growth".

An experienced piano teacher and keyboard solo artist, Haldeen has taught all ages and levels of advancement in private and class situations. His current concert season involves four separate piano programs in the Bay Area.

The class begins Thursday, Sept. 18, and will be taught every Thursday for 10 weeks at a cost of $16. Classes begin at 3:30 p.m. at the Shannon Park Community Center in Dublin. Further information is available at 828-7711.

BART computer 'inadequate'?

By JUSTIN ROBERTS

The Bay Area Rapid Transit District's central computer may have to be replaced at a cost of $5 million before the BART system can undertake full revenue service involving night and weekend service, according to a report from Legislative Analyst A. Alan Post.

Moreover, BART's equipment has proved so unreliable and inadequate, proposals such as an extension to the Oakland International Airport are virtually out of the question.

In a report submitted to state Sen. John A. Nejedly of Walnut Creek, Post said that preliminary studies undertaken by a University of California team of scientists indicate that the train control computer at BART central control in Oakland, may be inadequate for full service and may not be able to accommodate extensions of the present 71-mile system.

In addition, because of major problems with BART trains, the huge electric motors and braking systems in the Rohr passenger cars may have to be replaced.

And, car-borne train control equipment may also require replacement.

"In short," Post reported, "BART has many technical problems with hardware which need to be addressed. These take priority over consideration of any extensions to BART."

Nejedly requested an analysis of the Oakland airport extension proposal and BART's capacity to accommodate such a plan last summer after it was proposed by BART director Nello Bianco of Richmond.

The Times in 1972 reported exclusively that the Westinghouse central computer is incapable of accommodating service expanded beyond the originally planned 71-mile system and this publication also pointed out in 1973 that for BART to achieve reliability, both the central computer, which monitors train movements and programs, and the on-board equipment would have to be replaced. Westinghouse Electric Co. in 1972 installed two "mini-computers to augment the main equipment.

The Lawrence Berkeley Laboratory (LBL), acting under an agreement with the state legislature, is currently conducting a study of BART computer capacity and reliability. LBL is also acting as advisor on BART technology to the state Public Utilities Commission and to BART.

Post's report also states that the configuration of the BART track system is inflexible — requiring trains to proceed to the end of BART's various routes with the full number of cars they started with regardless of passenger demand, making for relatively limited service patterns. This means that trade-offs must be made in the level of service offered by the BART system and, therefore, any Oakland Airport extension would affect even the present level of service to the communities along BART's present routes.

BART directors in July shelved the Oakland extension proposal after director James Hill of Walnut Creek proposed amendments that would have precluded the Oakland Port Authority from applying for any federal or state grants that the transit district might also apply for.

Hill's plan also required the port authority to seek any grants required to finance the airport extension which was estimated at a cost of $93 million.

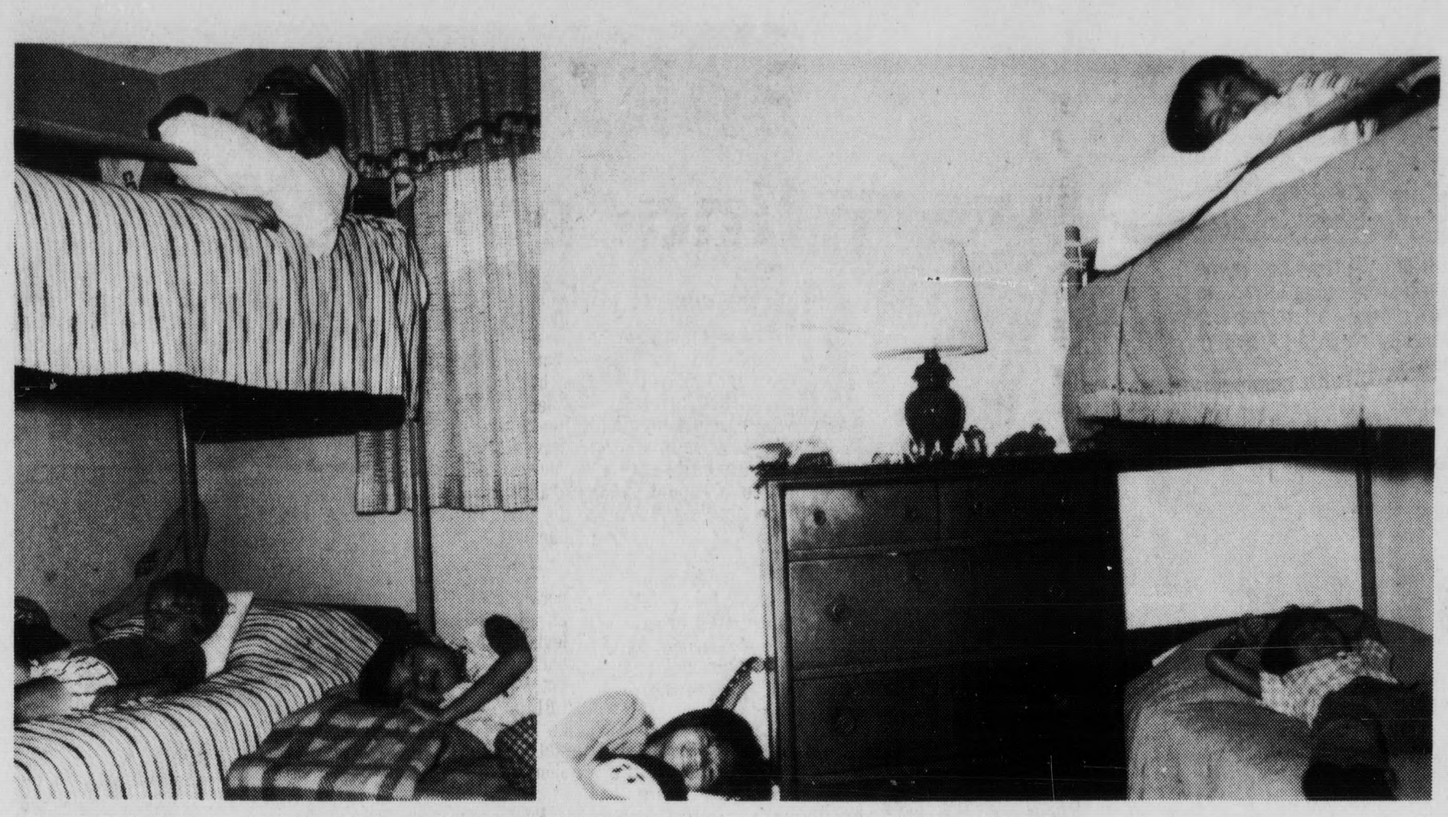
Pleasantonites welcome Vietnamese family



Six children demonstrate where they sleep; two sets of bunk beds have been added in the Eckelberger children's bedrooms.

"My children will eat nothing American!" the petite Vietnamese mother of four declared emphatically.

The American hostess turned pale. She had planned to serve chile and rice for the first meal. Captain Dinh Gia Nguyen of the Vietnamese Navy and his family had been invited to come and stay indefinitely at the home of the James E. Eckelbergers in Pleasanton.

Commander Eckelberger, new Assistant Supply Officer at Alameda Naval Air Station and Capt. Dinh (as everyone referred to him in Vietnam, and pronounced Ding) had met in Saigon in 1972. At that time Capt. Dinh was Commanding Officer of the Vietnamese Naval Supply Center; Cdr. Eckelberger was Senior U.S. Advisor there until 1973, when he came to NAS Alameda as Comptroller.

Let's return, however, to that tense afternoon on June 15, 1975, in the Pleasanton home—luxurious for four (the Eckelbergers have two sons—Todd, 7 and Chad, 4), but "bursting at the seams" with 10!

Quickly LeVan Dinh realized that something was wrong. She smiled timidly and spoke again in faltering English, "My children will eat anything American."

"Wonderful!" exclaimed Kathleen Eckelberger, exploding with laughter and hugging LeVan. Many times in the past three months the two families have laughed together as they seek to understand and accept one another.

As an example, Kathleen mentions the trials of eating with knife, fork and spoon versus chop sticks. Naturally it was difficult for the Vietnamese youngsters — Tam, 12; Hien, 10; Phong, 9; and Boa, 5 — immediately to eat gracefully with American utensils they had never used before. Todd and Chad giggled.

The next evening Kathleen set the table with chop sticks. Fortunately she had purchased quite a few when they were stationed in Guam in 1967-69. LeVan cooked a typical Vienamese dinner of Cha-Gio — egg roll with fresh greens; and rice is served at each meal, in place of bread. Now it was her children's turn to snicker as Todd and Chad clumsily but manfully tried to eat.

"It gave everyone confidence to try new things," said vivacious blonde Kathleen, "and to realize that sometimes it is fun to laugh at ourselves."

The Eckelbergers admit that it hasn't been necessary to use the English-Vietnamese — Vietnamese-English dictionary as often as they had expected. All but the youngest Dinh member had been trained in English, but Capt. Dinh was the only one who regularly had spoken it. The Vietnamese alphabet is the same as English but "f" and "j" are not normally used. Lots of accent marks change sounds and meanings of the same spelling. Vietnamese is a melodic language, created by speaking form the back of the throat and nose.

Use of a portable blackboard has proven a good way to communicate, writing a sentence in one language and then the other. A very popular phrase is, "Do you want strawberry shortcake?"

Eating whims are not catered to, however. Whatever is prepared is eaten. At first the Eckelberger boys protested that they didn't like Vietnamese food; actually the dishes were American casseroles and other "budget stretchers."

Senior Californian Naomi Formoe authors 'A Night in Pago Pago'

By REINA WHITNEY

Shades of Sophie Tucker!

Naomi Formoe has greasepaint in her blood, stars in her eyes and footlights in her still-young heart. Her dramatic bent is apparant in her flamboyant brown and gold muumuu set off with ropes of multi-colored shell leis.

Mrs. Formoe, a member of Senior Californians of Dublin-San Ramon, is ambitiously planning a production, "A Night In Pago Pago," to be acted by seniors. It has a scheduled January opening date.

"You don't have to be crazy to do things like this, but it helps," she laughs. Having once worked in light opera as a young girl and yet instilled with a verve of living that demands expression, Naomi came upon the idea of staging a musical for the Senior Californians when they were lamenting the fact that their membership was dropping.

"We need new ways to attract more members," urged their president, Lulu Westenberg. As the others were playing Bingo, Naomi was looking over the "talent" with which she had to work. There's Ray Edwards, an Irish tenor who used to travel with the Orpheum circuit. Who cares if he's now 87? Admittedly the rest are amateurs, but she said to herself, "Why Not?"

Before she left the weekly Thursday meeting, she started writing the play, based on an old fable she had heard as a child. Her son, now living in Pleasanton who during the war years had been stationed in Samoa, filled her with stories about his experiences in Polynesia. A trip she took with the Senior Californians to Hawaii also led to her fascination for the culture and history of the Islands.

All this provided the background for her one-act play.

The talented Naomi is not only author but she is also creating the original musical adaptation. In addition, she is designing the stage and furnishing the props. She's hoping there's a retired carpenter in the group who can help her build some of the stage background. She envisions a South Sea Island hut with a thatched roof and swaying palms for atmostphere.

As Naomi Formoe speaks you are swept along on her wave of enthusiasm. This self-avowed "artiste" has an electric-eclectic home, representative of her lifestyle

Bohemian nature. A Navaho rug at the entrance and a Persian rug in front of her hearth reveal her colorful tendencies.

Her walls are covered by still another form oF artistic expression — paintings in oils and watercolors. She says "I've never been afraid to try something new. "Painting, she feels, is so therapeutic that she can forget all her heartaches as she paints.

The beautiful way she handles the piano is her other avenue of escape and relaxation. She urges all seniors to get involved and keep busy. "It's the best way to forget your troubles," she says.

This was a lesson she had to learn early in life. Her deceased husband was a seaman, leaving her alone much of the time. There is a period in her background when she worked as a dress designer, and even considered going into journalism after having been a high school editor. "But at that time, it seemed too seamy," she quips in one of her characteristic asides.

AUTHORESS NAOMI FORMOE

'. . .greasepaint in her blood, stars in her eyes, footlights in her heart.'

She comes by her creativity through heredity. Her greatgrandfather was a drummer in the Civil War. An oil over her piano is a beautiful seascape painted by her mother.

"And my grandmother, " she laughs, "was really creative! She had twelve children." The staunch pioneer stock still shows through.

As a widow for six years, she is aware and sympathizes with the loneliness that plagues all seniors. Her one wish is to be able to go to the nursing homes in the area to entertain the forgotten ones regularly. For now she is getting up at three or four in the morning busily writing the script for her planned production.

Rehearsals will start soon for "A Night in Pago Pago." Mrs. Formoe urges all seniors in the area to contact her if they can sing or dance or would in anyway like to participate in her production. They are asked to leave their name, address and phone number at the Shannon Community Center in Dublin and Mrs. Formoe will contact them personally.

She likes to think of the play as a salute from the seniors to the nation for its Bicentennial birthday. Her reasoning is that as long as Samoa is a United States Protectorate, it can be considered a part of our country too. To quote Mrs. Formoe:

"If you want to see some-moa of Samoa, be looking for us in January."

St. Augustine Women welcome newcomers

A sharing of old personal treasures is only part of the delightful afternoon in store for women interested in 'sWo getting acquainted with the St. Augustine's Women's Club. Pat Potter, Pat Boone, Eleanor Flatley, Mary Jacobs and Helen O'Brien will be among club members eager to make newcomers a part of their active group. Members and guests will gather at 11:15 a.m. for a tour of the Villa Armando winery in Pleasanton, followed by wine-tasting and a luncheon. For more information, you are asked to call 846-5426.

N.O.W. agenda told

The Tri-Valley Chapter of the National Organization for Women will discuss the Equal Rights Amendment and "Alice Doesn't" Day Thursday, Sept. 18 at Dublin's Homestead Savings and Loan Association.

Ms. Patti Grossman, a Livermore attorney, will open the 7:30 p.m. meeting with a workshop on the ERA designed to clarify issues in the controversy. She will define the specific legal consequences which may result from ratification of the amendment, and answer anti-ERA arguments.

The second part of the program will be an "Alice Doesn't" rally to build enthusiasm for the general strike planned Oct. 29. Joan Holden will present a play entitled "The Independent Female (or A Man Has His Pride)" as an old-fashioned melodrama with a new message touched with humor.

For information contact Judy Matheson at 829-4642 or Dee Manning at 455-5589.

St. Mary's College opens 'whole class experience course in Livermore

LIVERMORE — Local teachers will be able to take a course sponsored by St. Mary's College, "Ways That Work," at a Livermore school this fall.

The course will be taught by Thayer Jones. who wrote and taught the KQED-TV series, "Math on the Move." He has extenstive experience with field trips, backpacking and out-of-school educational experiences for students. The Berkeley board of education granted autonomy and special funds to Jones to operate a multi-graded, racially mixed experimental class whose curriculum was designed not to discriminate against black children.

In the new course, teachers and the instructor together will participate in activities that (1) demonstrate how unifying, whole-class experiences can delight, motivate, challenge and promote readiness; and (2) show how children who vary widely in ability and readiness can become cooperative learners.

The course will include communication skills, motivation, educational games, a simplified math program, control and discipline, and a problem-solving technique.

The course is designed to improve the effectiveness of teachers of gardes 3-6. Classes will be at Sonoma School, 543 Sonoma Ave., 7-10 p.m. on 15 Mondays. Three semester units of credit can be earned. The credit fee is $25, tuition $50. The class will be limited to 30 people and is open not only to teachers but to teacher trainees and persons who can influence the education of elementary-school children.

Further information may be obtained from Thayer Jones at 843-3751 or by writing P.O. Box 995, Berkeley, CA 94701.

Take a good look at the parking problem

Perhaps the Livermore Downtown Merchants, who believe they are plagued by a serious parking problem, should take a good look at the situation before it is pursued further.

Presently the parking lot on the north side of the buildings which line the city's First Street is supported by business license fee surcharges levied on First, South J and South K street merchants. They have protested they are paying an undue portion of the parking costs, the lots are being used largely by people who have business with the county or in the municipal courts and that the customer should share the cost of parking.

The uproar, however mild, has brought discussion before the city council and with it suggestions for a cure.

Most frequently mentioned of these cures is some form of parking fee for those who drive automobiles to the area.

Most often mentioned of these cures are entry gates for the municipal parking lot, attendants at the lot, and parking meters.

None of these cures show much promise of doing anything for business in downtown Livermore.

A one entrance, one exit parking gate on a municipal lot would force all who entered to pay the same fee, whether staying for one or ten hours.

Is it possible the person who wanted to come downtown for a quick purchase could be frightened away from the area by the thought of having an extra dollar or so added to their purchase in the form of parking fees.

Attendants would probably cost the city something in the neighborhood of $10,000 a year.

Could the money used for those attendants be used for constructior of new lots which would last for years?

How many enemies would parking meters make for downtown Livermore with the many tickets which would inevitably be written for those who had unintentionally overstayed their visit?

And where, from any of these suggestions, is there any promise that pay parking in downtown Livermore, or anywhere in the valley, would bring more business to that area.

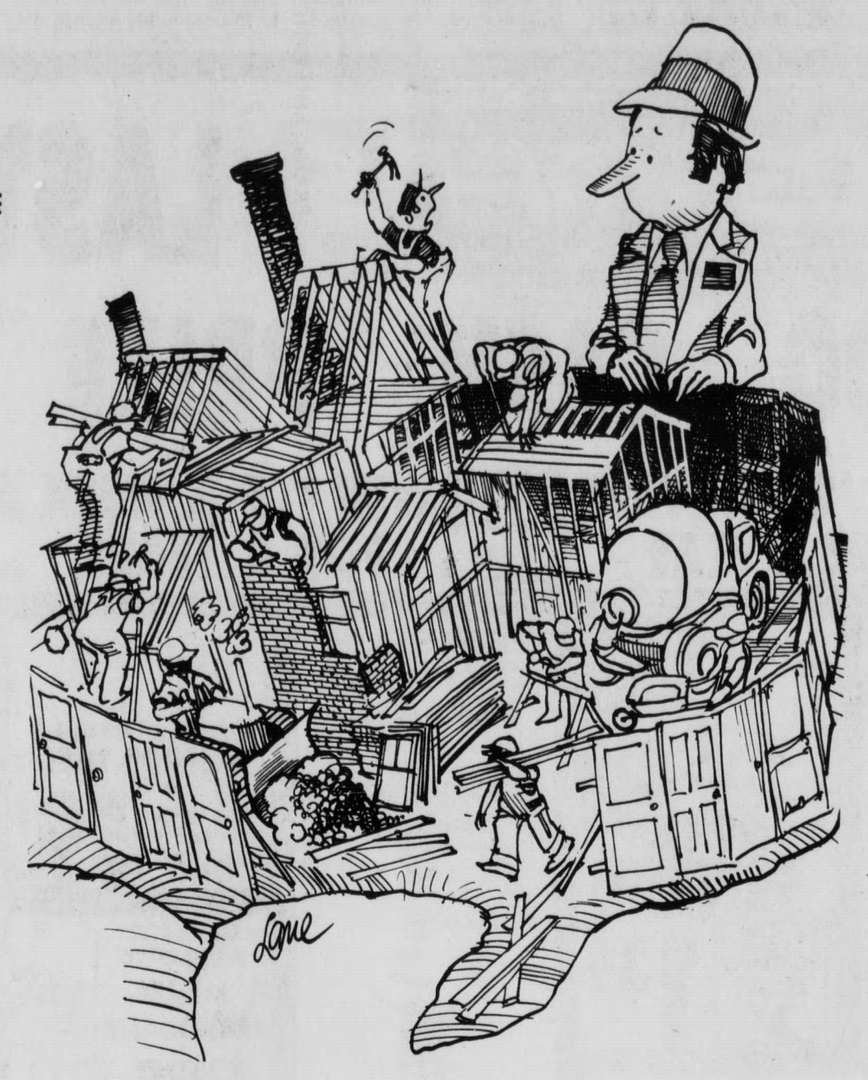
Parking, with the exception of Dublin which appears to be amply supplied winith parking places, is a universal problem in the valley. Pleasanton's parking headache, while not as large as Livermore's, is sometimes acute. There have been threats of blockades in some Pleasanton parking rows.

Dublin alone, a new city, has little parking problem. Certainly the businessmen there would sympathize with those in Livermore and Pleasanton who do not enjoy their advantages.

So too would they and the owners of much more distant shopping centers, be grateful for the business which flowed from the downtown cores into their ample parking space.

It is something to think about. Pay parking does not appear to be the answer for either Livermore or Pleasanton.

Housing starts? No. Bicentennial souvenir stands.



Hindsight/Foresight

The environment. . .

Is it to late to preserve clean, clear air in the valley and the remnants of wilderness in the surrounding hills? Whe subject up as summer ebbs and after two personally rewarding weekends on river raft trips on Northern California rivers.

Our value of a clean environment has been reinforced as the result of these experiences. Though we are still somewhat short of being a prospective convert to the Sierra Club doctrine.

After a period of time in a river and mountains environment, such as thatwhere the Stanislaus and Tuolumne flow, one is almost shocked when "re-entering" the Bay Area .. or, worse yet, the Greater Los Angeles Area.The haze, the seemingly eternal ribbons of cement and the intrusion of formerly open areas by crackerbox homes and other pre-cast structures borders on the offensive.

I believe it is long past time that we become vigilant in our awareness and protection of open areas and pursuit of clean, clear air.

But it must be done through established channels, which means citizen pressure being brought to bear on city and county planners as well as area legislators and regional agencies.

The experience of rafting a supposedly wild river can raise one's conscience to new levels or, at least, put the urban-suburban scene in a different perspective.

As you might have suspected by now, this is not only a pitch for being ever-watchful of our environment but for rediscovering the great out-of-doors.

We strongly recommend a river raft trip, whether it be a one-day or overnight trip. If nothing else, it will cleanse the senses.

The rafting experience can be accomplished by most anyone from 8 or 9 years of age into the depending on one's physical state.

Our junkets ranged from highly challenging (Tuolumne) to scenic and mildly challenging (Stanislaus). We would recommend the latter for first-time raft excursions.

Yet, even these rivers are becoming the play thing of thousands....no longer being in remote areas.

The stretches that we traveled seemingly needed traffic cops to direct the dozens of river rafts and kayaks. We have come to the point where dam projects and pleasure-seekers are about to turn these rivers into water highways.

If that should come to past, it would be a tragedy.

So we make our recommendation with a certain amount of foreboding, knowing that dozens if not hundreds more could "discover" the beautiful, relatively unspoiled mountains and canyons that the Stanislaus and Tuolumne run through.

The challenge truly comes in trying to maintain these areas in a natural state, and prevent them from becoming another Tahoe.

The executive branch

Women Voter League

This month, the League of Women Voters of the Livermore - Amador Valley is studying the Executive Branch of the federal government. The public is invited to attend one of the four presentation- and- discusion sessions being held at various times and places from September 22 through September 25. (Call the League at 455-0800 for details.)

The framers of the Constitution were men of property, steeped in traditions of English law. They quoted John Locke to defend their revolution against the English King — "men have the right to revolution(when a monarch makes war on the(people."

But they rejected Lokke's opinion that the executive shoqld have the "power to act according to discretion for the public good, without prescription of law and sometimes even against it." Their president must act within the law! They certainly didn't want another king.

On he other hand, the idea of the "supremacy of the Legislature"(had been discredited. The Continental Congrass, under the Articles of Confederation, had acted — through a committee — as its own executive. The committee had been a dismal failure. The founding fathers expected Congress, as policy-makers, to be the focus of government.

But it is the President who "shall take care that the laws be faithfully executed." Article II of the Constittion begins with "The Executivm Power shall be vested in a President of the United States of America" — not in the Congress.

(The founding fathers, then, wanted the president and the Congress to have separate powers of their own. They agreed with Montesquieu that "confusion of power in the same hands was tyranny."

But how to design this strong presidency? They argued for many days over the details of Article II. When they were through, there were many critics — including Patrick Henry, who called it "an awful squint towards monarchy."

In The Federalist Papers, Alexander Hamilton took on the job of defending Article II.

He wrote that a good executive must be energetic and vigorous "for the steady administration of laws, protection of property, security of liberty against faction and protection from foreign attacks."

round the town

Associated Press says: "Governor Brown still refuses to move into that million dollar residence which is the official "Governor's Mansion" for the State of California.

United Press says: "Governor Edmund Brown Jr. still has an outside chance for the nation's presidency in 1976, and is almost a cinch to be a contender in 1980."

I says: "What's going to happen to the White House once Edmund G. Brown Jr. moves to Washington?"

No one is really giving that problem the attention it deserves. The State Department is making great head-way in solving two other countries' warlike tendencies. The Ag Department is working at shipping our bread to the Ruskies. Even the Unemployment Department is making certain it has a long and busy future.

But what, I ask, is the President's Residency Department doing about our Jerr's aversion to large houses?

Our beloved governor prefers cozy third-story pads to the splendor of official residences ... Sacramento or D.C. versions thereof. Jerr says he's saving us taxpayers money, and setting a good example, to boot.

But there are logistical, political and protocol problems here that need careful examination, before Mr. Brown goes to Washington.

We take you now to Washington. The year is 1981. President Edmund G. Brown Jr. has just been sworn into office. Ms. Indira Brown (forgot to mention, Jarr married his Guru) is tired from all this presidential pomp, and she so advises her husband.

Mr. President, my feet hurt like hell. What say we retire to the White House for a little libation, a rest, and whatever else comes naturally?"

"The White House does not come naturally," the President states, firmly. "It is an unnatural place, a tribute to kings and no-good-niks, and I will have no part of it."

"I could care less about your hangup on big houses," Indira Brown replies, "the only part of that White House which interests me right now is the bed, and I intend to get a little sack time before the big Presidential Ball, the banquet and all those other inaugural goodies."

"That's something else I forgot to mention, sweeticums, your President is not much on dancing, and he has made a thing about refusing to go to banquets and all that other foolishness!"

"FOOLISHNESS is it?" Ms. Brown says, sharply, "Then why pray tell did you take on this job if you don't intend to also accept the fringe benefits ... that White House pad, the 126 sevants, the free use of a battleship to cruise in and a private helicopter always standing by..."

"I don't fly," the President Jerr interrupted," at least not in a private craft. I prefer to fly the commercial lines, coach. And never on weekends, or from June 1 through September 11, or from November 15 through January 10. The rates are higher during all holiday periods, as you know."

"All I know, Mr. President," the new first lady says, 'is that you are some kind of kook. Whoever heard of a president of these United States riding tourist coach class on a commercial airline? Next thing you'll be telling me that you prefer Holiday Inn over the Sheraton Palace when we visit San Francisco."

"MacDonald's," the president replies. "I really prefer MacDonald's. They make wonderful hamburgers, and you get two big patties on a sesame bun, plus a milkshake. All for under two dollars."

Well, the conversation moves along in this spirited manner until Joan Baez, the newly-appointed Chief of the Secret Service, interrupts.

"We really should be moving along, Jerr," Chief Joanie-Girl says. (All the president's people are encouraged to work on a first-name basis.) "The head of the CIA wants to have a very urgent, very top secret session with you right away."

"Let him talk to me right here, in front of all these good people, and all these television cameras," Prez Jerr says. "I HAVE NO SECRETS FROM THE AMERICAN PEOPLE," he adds, loudly.

"I'll tell him," the secret service chief says, stalking away with her guitar case, "but I just know he's going to be upset about meeting with you this way, out in the open and everything."

After a brief pause, the head of CIA arrives, licking his fingers.

"Hope I didn't keep you waiting, Jerr," he says, still licking, "but I snuck off for a quick hamburger before this top secret briefing."

"Quite alright," the president replies, "did yoq get two meat patties on the sesame bun? Its very economical."

"No, I didn't," the head of the CIA replies, "I didn't have time to eat all that food and still give that special briefing to Secretary of State Angela Davis."

"Ah yes," the prez says, "a very bright girl. "I look forward to a new era of peace under her foreign policy leadership. Particularly with the Third and Fourth Worlds."

"And speaking of Worlds," the prez says, turning toward his First Lady. "What say we plan a round-the-world trip to formally launch our presidency? I have this friend who made this fablulous boat, using nothing but empty pea shells. We could paddle South to the Bahamas, then swing over to Nairobi and . . ."

But Ms. Brown is not listening. She has in fact, flown the coop.

"What, pray tell, has happened to my beloved wife and former Guru?" the president, asks incredulously.

"I don't know how to break this to you," Joanie-Girl says, "but your beloved Indira has left you."

"Ah well," the president replies. "She really wasn't much of a Guru, anyway. And she fried a terrible egg. Now what is this top secret info the head of my CIA has to impart? Speak up, we're among friends, 220 million of 'em."

"Your father has just arrived for a six-months' visit," the CIA chief reports.

"Gosh darn," Prez Jerr replies. "Now I know why presidents need big houses. Give Dad the key to the White House. I'm going back to my room in the YMCA. Tell 'em to get my laundry out of the pool, Joanie-Girl. The President is coming!"

Sound and Fury

Walt Hecox

Once upon a time there lived in a remote valley on the far side of Never-Never land a simple farmer with a large family which he was barely able to feed.

He was not a very good farmer, nor a particularly smart person, but he worked hard and, with the strength of his back, the sweat of his brow and the gnarled and knotty callouses on his hands, he managed to harvest enough grain to provide each of his children with a bowl of gruel and slice of unbuttered bread a day.

On the rare days when he and the family celebrated a holiday they would eat roast goose taken from one of their thin flock, an expensive indulgence because the geese provided the only eggs and most of the protein, (although they did not know it as protein) in their regular diet.

These geese lived in grass nests behind the barnyard and each day geese produced one large egg each. The geese who were the real producers, all died of old age and were virtually inedible by that time, so the farmer could not possibly know that when they died they did not have a large supply of eggs stored in their bodies.

The ganders, on the other hand, were slaughtered as soon as they showed signs of becoming ineffective and provided fine Christmas dinners because in those days, even in Never-Never land, everyone celebrated Christmas.

One day the farmer went back to collect his eggs and found in one nest a large egg of solid gold.

Overjoyed by his good fortune the farmer rushed into Lostville, the capital of Never-Never land and bought rare gifts and delicacys for his family and himself.

Each day then the same goose presented him with one golden egg daily which he took to town to spend on more goodies and gifts.

Before long his family was the best fed and clothed in all of Abjuration, the county in Never-Never land where the farmer lived, but their house was poor compared to those of their neighbors and he would have to save many eggs before he had enough money to build a mansion worthy of his new station.

The farmer thought about the problem and eventually decided there was no reason to wait for the eggs, the goose must be full of them and with that thought in mind he killed her and cut open her body and searched for the supply of golden eggs.

Of course there were none there and once again the farmer scratched a bare living from the soil while the family ate the last of the delicacies and wore their fine clothes until they were in rags.

The story does not end happily ever after because the family which had such a good thing going was once again reduced to rags and a daily bowl of gruel and a few eggs and they lived ever after, though not happily, in the hovel the farmer had dreamed of turning into a mansion when he killed the goose that laid the golden eggs.

It is only coincidence, I suppose, that by- some accident over the weekend I discovered the name of the farmer was Ed Garven Garvey.

Somehow I find some similarity between that Ed Garvey who lived in Never-Never land with the goose who laid the golden eggs and the laddie who directs the destinies of the National Football League Players' Association.

Probably the silliest caper on the sports front since Amy Love demanded and won a place on a San Ramon boy's soccer team was the vote by the New England Patriots to strike on the eve of their exhibition game with the New York Jets.

The Patriots must have known what they were doing when they voted to strike only hours before they were due to appear on the field but I doubt they are aware of the grave consequences of their act if other teams in the league follow them.

Football is a welcome spectacle each fall to many of us. We look forward to the artificial dramatics each Sunday, a welcome relief when summer is over and the days turn chill and the afternoons shorter and shorter.

We throng to the stadia on afternoons when the team is home and huddle beside television sets sipping hot toddies and overeating when it is away and spend some part of each week taking over for the quarterback and the coach and telling our friends and neighbors what they did wrong and why.

Football is a way of life for many of us and few of the giant stadia which have been erected all over the United States would have been constructed had it not been for the game which is, in autumn's dreary days, the real national pastime.

But football is not invulnerable, my friends. Most of us who are true fans by now have seen the show many, many times.

There is no follower of the Oakland Raiders who does not find each game he sees a little anti-climatic after witnessing the miracles performed by George Blanda in 1970.

The show goes on, but the peak performance is past and we live in relative monotony with the perfection of Ken Stabler and the blinding speed of Cliff Branch, Mike Siani and Morris Bradshaw.

The most rabid stands in the coliseum, the robust rowdies in Section 310, gather each Sunday beside a beaten camper and sip their wheat squeezings beheath a wellitattered banner, gray and soiled with age, which reads, "here we are" added as an afterthought and after many years is the single word, "again."

Nothing lives forever, not even professional football, and the best way to kill it is to call off a few games during the regular season because of a player's strike.

Most of the folks in these United States make one hell of a lot less money than any professional athlete and we consider those who make their living playing a child's game pretty damn lucky.

So call your strike Ed Garvey. Pull your players from the field and put the owner's in their place. Then the sign where that dilapidated camper once parked might be flying beside an empty parking space could well read, "We're not here. Gone bowling. Never again."

And another Ed Garvey will have laid an egg instead of letting the goose, who knew what she was doing, put food on the table for her large and youthful family.

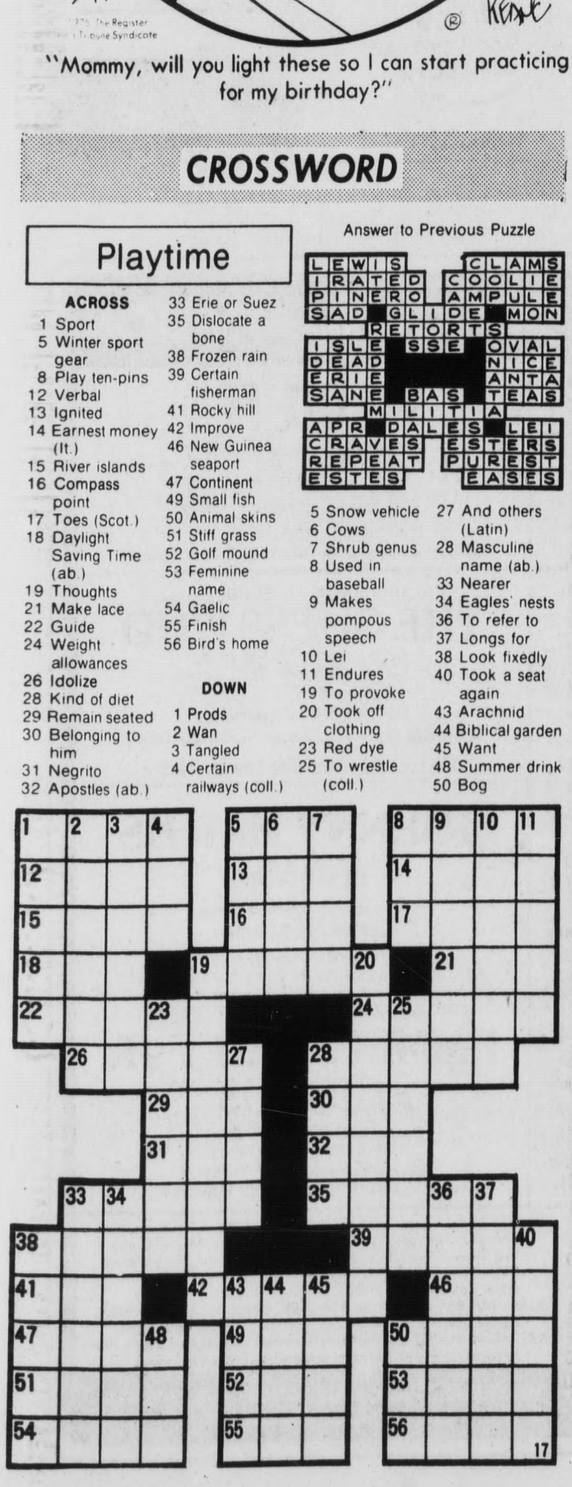
Answer to Previous Puzzle



astrograph

by Bernice Bede Osol

For Wednesday Sept. 17, 1975

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You'll be generally fortunate at what you undertake today. However, for some reason you'll shave your own chances a bit.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Be sure to acknowledge one who is helpful today, or else he may be hesitant to do you a favor again.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) There will be an opportunity presented to you through a friend, but you're likely to take less advantage of it than you could.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Make it a point to see that each share equally today where there will be three parties involved, or someone will be slighted.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You're still lucky today in matters requiring teamwork. Your partner will hold up his end. Just be sure you hold up yours.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You'll be tempted to slack off a bit where your work or career is concerned today, but you shouldn't. The possibility of larger rewards is still there.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) If you're doing any entertaining today keep the group to a manageable number. A few extra guests will tip the boat.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You'll enjoy reasonable success today, provided you don't let one who doesn't know what to do with her time involve you in a fruitless pursuit.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You'll be a bit reluctant to put your ideas to the test today, though they'll work surprisingly well if given half a chance.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Your material prospects are still promising, but there's a small caution: You may not be fully aware of the opportunities surrounding you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Your imagination is your most dependable ally today. It's wise to consider suggestions, but don't let them overwhelm your views.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Something profitable to you will suddenly develop out of the blue today. Failure to follow through will diminish it's worth.

Your Birthday

Sept. 17, 1975
You'll form two fortunate associations this year that could provide you with additional sources of revenue. Rewards will come from a talent or service you have to offer.

Opening lead — J ♦

By Oswald & James Jacoby

Frank Schuld has just published a book called "The Simple Squeeze in Bridge." Today's hand is taken from an article about the book in the American Bridge Teacher's quarterly.

Frank points out that North could have bid three notrump and there wouldn't have been any problems. But that wasn't the case. West ruffs the third one and leads a club. North settled for four hearts. The defense starts with three rounds of diamonds. West ruffs the third one and leads a club.

It is apparent that East holds both the queen of clubs and king of spades as part of his weak opening bid so both finesses are wrong. This shouldn't bother South at all. The play involved here has the fancy name of "Vienna Coup", but it should be simple common sense.

South plays a couple of rounds of trumps and then establishes East's king as the high spade by cashing the ace. Then he runs off the rest of his trumps to come down to the 10 of spades and deuce of clubs in his hand and king-jack of clubs in dummy.

East will see that it is suicide to unguard his queen of clubs and will chuck the king of spades in the hope that West has the 10. The hope is futile and the game is scored.

Ask the Jacobys

A New Jersey reader wants to know what we bid after our right hand opponent opens one diamond. We hold:
♠ A K 10 9 6 4 ♥ A 6 5 ♦ 4 x x ♣ x x.

We simply overcall one spade. In modern bidding this may be a pretty good hand. Of course, if we played intermediate jump overcalls we could jump to two spades.

We do not make a takeout double with this type of hand, since it is not strong enough to double and then bid spades later on after our partner makes the expected minor suit response.

(Do you have a question for the Jacobys? Write "Ask the Jacobys" care of this newspaper. The most interesting questions will be used in this column and writers will receive copies of JACOBY MODERN.)

Beaten Dons lick wounds

Of all the hard knocks Amador Valley High suffered in its opening loss to Mission San Jose last Friday, just two look serious today.

The Dons, who fell, 34-6, lost reserve lineman Mark Smith for the season after the 5-10, 170 junior slipped on a runway and broke his leg prior to the second half kickoff.

They also lost junior quarterback John Sevo who jammed a thumb in the second period. Sevo probably will not play this Friday when Amador opens its home schedule with Tracy.

"Somebody missed an assignment on a block, and one of their guys crunched him," coach Fred Wood explained. Wood said either Mike Guglielmo or Randy Tallarico will take over as the director of Amador's wishbone offense this week.

Tallarico worked at quarterback during pre-season practices, but played last week at tight end. Guglielmo replaced Sevo in the second period and played the remainder of the game.

Mike, a 6-1, 174 junior, hurt himself because of nervousness during his first few series. Late in the game, however, he engineered one of Amador's few sustained drives. Unfortunately it climaxed abruptly with an interception at the Mission San Jose five yard line.

None of the other Amador players were seriously hurt in that game, though at least five limped off the field with injuries. "Most of them had charlie horses or cramps," Wood said. "I think it was just fatigue, so we're running them harder this week."

Larry McInerney, a 5-8, 189 senior tackle, limped off the field in the second half with a twisted ankle, but he should be ready for Tracy.

Wood hopes his defense will be ready after yielding nearly 300 rushing yards to Mission. There will be a couple of changes in the lineup, with Mike Bruns, 6-0, 180, moving from linebacker to defensive tackle. Craig Ramos will probably switch from the secondary to Bruns' linebacking spot, and offensive back Ken Carney may fill the hole in the defensive backfield.

Amador gave up huge chunks of yardage right in the center of its defensive line, and never did devise a method to stop 215 pound fullback Sean Sullivan, and 200 pound tailback Kevin Turner. They both gained more than 100 yards.

"There's no question we were undersized," Wood said yesterday. "But that's no excuse. We were not a good tackling team, so we'll spend a lot of time on that this week.

"I thought the offense did a pretty good job," Wood added. "We moved the ball well early in the game, and I watched some teams this weekend who couldn't move it at all."

Sevo directed one good touchdown drive before he departed, hitting on a key third-down screen pass that covered 30 yards. He also made a couple of good runs on option keepers.

JIM LAMB says if you really want some excellent fishing, along with lots of fresh air and beautiful scenery, try hiking up King's River. Jim says the trip is well worth the time. Lots of golden trout up in that region, as well as the ever-present rainbows. According to Jim, the goldens all ran around 12 inches, while his biggest rainbow was a good 14.

YOU STILL HAVE a chance to get some doves here in the valley so don't give up because they are scattered. Go on out to your favorite flyway and you may be lucky enough to get a limit yet.

JIM CRAMER spent a few days down in Baja. Lots of fishing, good beaches and beautiful scenery. Jim has pictures proving Baja is the place for a fantastic fishing vacation!

SEVERAL BIG SETS of good wide horns came in from the Mt. Hamilton area this weekend. Nice big brown horns — must be lots of good feed and water up in that area. If you haven't got your forked horn or better in the coast season, just wait a week and try for the inland bucks.

BEFORE INLAND buck season starts, you may want to sight in your fan. You can do this at the Livermore-Pleasanton Rod and Gun Club. It's open every day except Tuesday, with ranges up to 200 yards' A Range Master will be there this weekend to help you with your problems

SOME INTERESTING INFORMATION from researchers of a major insurance company lists the most "dangerous sports." The five most hazardous, in order, are shown as football, skiing, baseball, swimming, and basketball. Fishing ranks 13th, and hunting 16th.

THE DEPARTMENT of Fish and Game said, "I told you so," in notices last week to 467 Californians who had submitted more than one application each for permits to hunt on state-operated waterfowl areas during 1974-75.

The notices of violation from DFG License Chief James L. Christopher informed the would-be hunters that they will be barred from all such areas during the 1975-76 season.

Christopher, quoting the regulation in Title 14 of the California Administrative Code, reminded the scofflaws that they will not even be allowed on the areas as partners of reservation holders or from the nonreservation first-come, first-served line.

"And, should you submit any applications for reservations during the 1975-75 season," said Christopher, "they will not be honored."

The DFG has repeatedly warned persons to resist any temptation to better their chances of being drawn for a reservation by submitting more than one application for any of the areas during either half of the season.

In addition, adult hunters were cautioned not to file for more than two hunting dates for each area during each half of the season.

Until this year, violators were barred from the areas only for the remainder of the season during which the violation occurred.

The more stringent penalty was adopted by the Fish and Game Commission in an effort to stem the growing number of cheaters.

"The commission hopes," said Christopher, "that the prospect of losing the privilege to hunt the areas for a full year will deter the practice, keeping the drawings fair for all applicants."

During the season, Christopher explained, the DFG is able to make only spot checks for violators. Before last season, this meant that many violations went undetected. However, a complete check now is made after the season closes.

"Therefore," he said, "just about the time a lot of cheaters are congratulating themselves on having gotten away with it again, they will suddenly be faced with the prospect of no place to hunt waterfowl next year."

To prevent unintentional violations, hunters are advised to keep careful records of all applications so they will not forget one and unknowingly submit another for the same area during the same half of the season.

The one-application limit applies even if an application is not drawn for a reservation

"We sincerely hope," Christopher wrote in closing the notices of violation, "that your submission fo applications in future years will be done in accordance with regualations so we will never again be required to take this action against you."

The San Ramon Spitfires defeated the Livermore Volunteers, 4-3, with Joe Keller, Eric Newell and Jim Corder scoring for the losers. Newell had five first-half saves.

The Minutemen defeated the Fremont Vikings, 5-0, behind the defense of Russ Kellman and Rolando Moreno. Nick Perjanik, Ivan Farris, Dave Garrison, Greg Mellor and John Gatrousis scored Mellor and Randy Green combined for seven saves in goal.

The Fremont Celtics pounded the Cannonball, 4-0. John Wood had 14 saves for Livermore. Greg Hedrik and John Seichter played well.

The Rangers stopped the Pioneers, 3-1, as Steve Aguiar scored twice. Mike Disbro had a goal. Barry Rogers and Dennis Thiessen teammed for seven saves. Randy Grant, Jeff Keller and Trent Albro were top defenders. For the losers, Ted Tonne scored, and Loren Maccario had 13 saves.

The Royal Crosshaws fell to the San Ramon Hurricanes, 6-2. Paul Gunter and Ed McThorn scored for the losers. Dave Miramonte had 17 saves in the second half. John Braden, Joe Hughes and Mike Gregory played well.

The Livermore Chargers managed a 2-2 tie with Ballistic United, on scores by Stuart Lawson and Pat Kerrigan Dave Rashe played well though he didn't score. John Howard and Joe Digiallonardo played well in goal. Terry Jacobs, Tim Austin and John Waldera keyed the Charger defense.

The Royal Crusaders bombed the Mustang Rustlers, and their goal keeper, Amy Love, 5-0. Neil Abramsom and Don Boggini scored two goals each. Phillip Paslay also scored. Defenders Kurt Shadbolt and Sean Pardue were outstanding. Amy had 18 saves for the Rustlers.

Ajax falls

Marty Farris and Kevin Mayn scored the goals as the Ballistic United under-10 squad edged Fremont Ajax, 2-1 as Nicky Pearson had three saves last weekend in Al Caffodio soccer.

Brian Warman, Clark Morris and Greg Strommer all played good defense and Lennie McMillin displayed good kicking.

No more 'Kill, Bubba, kill'

OAKLAND — The Oakland Raiders, who waived former All-Pro defensive end Bubba Smith, let him know about it only after he had watched a final practice.

"I just stood around, and John Madden told me before I left. He said they tried to trade me, but it didn't work out," Smith revealed yesterday.

The Raiders waived Smith as they got down to the National Football League's 43-man roster limit Monday.

But 46 players, including Smith, were in uniform for Monday's practice. There was no practice yesterday.

The Raiders do not announce cuts. There was speculation that two players, defensive back Mike Reinfeldt and running back Louis Carter, were placed on the injured reserve list.

Smith, 30, joined the Raiders in 1973 after spending most of his final season with the Baltimore Colts recuperating from a serious knee injury. He started most of the 1973 season but was playing behind Tony Cline when the 1974 season opened.

Kelvin Korver, a third-year pro, apparently will be the only reserve defensive lineman for the Raiders this season, with Cline, Art Thoms, Otis Sistrunk and Horace Jones returning as starters.

Smith said he had an idea beforehand the Raiders would let him go, and he added, "It would have been cool if they would have let it happen early in training camp. But that's not quite the way they do things with the Raiders.

The Raiders held a meeting Monday to discuss the New England Patriots' strike against the NFL, but team player representative Willie Brown said the Raiders did not take a vote on whether to back the Pats and did not plan to meet again until Wednesday or Thursday. —Associated Press.

A good crop

"I just planted it out here and it grew" modestly asserts H.R Shamblin, Sr., of 4432 First St. in Pleasanton. The larger tomato here weighs in at a hefty 1¾ pounds while three of Shamblin's crop totalled 4¾ pounds. There's always a question of taste with such large vegetables, but Shamblin claims "They're wonderful, just wonderful."

East Bay Parks schedule cruise

Is there a budding scientist in the family?

An oceanographer, perhaps, or marine biologist? An East Bay Regional Park voyage, Saturday, Oct. 5, could mean the turning point for many an undecided student.

Valley youth (and adults too) are invited on a four-hour voyage of the 85-foot research vessel, "Inland Sea." The trip is jointly sponsored by the East Bay Regional Park District, which serves Alameda and Contra Costa Counties, and by the Hayward Area Recreation and Park District.

The fee is $10 per person, minimum age 11 years. Only 20 EBRPD residents will be allowed, so an early signup is in order. Those interested must mail their check, names, address and phone number to Naturalist Paul Ferreira, Coyote Hills Regional Park, 8000 Patterson Ranch Road, Fremont, by Sept. 29.

There are biology, chemistry and auxiliary laboratories aboard the "Inland Sea." Icthyology, invertebrate biology, water chemistry, estuarine geology, plankton, bottom sediment analysis, marine life and aquatic habitat are studied.

During the past four years, some 42,000 students from more than 300 schools in 13 countries have enrolled in Marine Ecological Institute cruises on the ship.

It wasn't his day

LIVERMORE — It just wasn't Charles Doty's day.

Police were called to a home on El Caminito Thursday where a man was reportedly trying to beat down the front door. Upon arriving, they found Charles Doty standing on the front porch.

The complaintant said she wished to file no charges against Doty, but just wanted him to leave, which he started to do upon police request.

He got in his car, which was Parked in the driveway, and slowly backed up — right into Sgt. Jerome Weakland's patrol car.

Doty was arrested for drunk driving by the California Highway Patrol, who were called in to take the accident report.

Scout awards

PLEASANTON — Eight rank advancements and 91 merit badge presentations highlighted Boy Scout Troop 916's Court of Honor held Monday, Sept. 8 at the Highland Oaks Recreation Center.

Sponsored by the Highland Oaks Homeowners' Association, twenty scouts attended Diamond-O Scout Camp near Yosemite in July under the direction of Bill Cromwell, Leland Anderson and Gerhard Schwaegerle and won the Scoutmanship Award.

Scoutmaster Len Whitbred and Cliff Woodward took 14 boys on a 50-mile hike in August. For the upcoming year, Mark Anderson will serve as Senior Patrol Leader, with Bill hHenkel as assistant.

The troop meets every Monday at 7 p.m. at the Highland Oaks Recreation Center. Any boy 11-years-old or older is invited to attend the next meeting.

Solar power is big California business

LOS ANGELES (AP) — California is famous for its sunshine, but today the sun is producing energy as well as tans:

— In El Toro, 70 miles southeast of Los Angeles, Southern California Gas Co. is using the sun's rays to generate 70 per cent of the hot wate needs of a 32-unit apartment building.

— In Sacramento, the new governor's mansion will have a $20,000 solar-heated water system.

— In Menlo Park, a small company developed a solar pool heater now being used by homeowners in 25 states.

— In Los Angeles, county supervisors have drafted an ordinance requiring new dwellings to provide for future installation of solar-powered heating and cooling systems.

The Desert Water Agency, biggest electrical user in the Palm Springs area, hopes to be well under way by mid-1976 with a project making use of solar cells to power a water pump.

A Palm Springs Chamber of Commerce subcommittee, noting the city averages 4,000 hours of sunshine a year, also proposes creation of a square mile solar park preserve for a "solar applications institute" and exhibit buildings, research and development facilities and a solar electric power plant big enough to supply a major portion of the community's energy needs.

Solar power has gotten a boost because of the rocketing cost of oil. It is also nonpolluting.

"The idea of solar water heating is nothing new, but the problem has been that it was cheaper to use fossil fuel," says a spokesman for SoCal Gas. The company's El Toro project is one of the nation's largest solar heating experiments.

The $1 million apartment system, called Solar Assisted Gas Energy (SAGE), was developed by the gas company, the National Science Foundation, Caltech's Jet Propulsion Laboratory and the Federal Energy Administration. It is expected to save about 1,200 cubic feet of natural gas daily. Hot water needs not met by the solar system are supplied by a conventional gas heater.

Most solar energy systems are used for heating water because the cost of producing electricity from sunshine is still too high for anything except experimental applications, most experts agree.

One commercial success in the solar energy field has been solar swimming pool heaters developed by Fafco, Inc., of Menlo Park.

Freeman Ford, Fafco's founder and president, says he got involved with solar heating because "I felt it had been a backyard inventor's delight that had not received honest commercial scrutiny."

Fafco's sytem utilizes thin panels of black plastic called collectors to heat water fed into them by the pool's pumps. The panels, which are arranged on a sloping roof or specially built rack, absorb the sun's heat and pass it on to the water flowing through them.

A control mechanism with a built-in thermometer turns the system on when the sun is shining and leaves it off on overcast days.

"The heating of swimming pools is an ideal venture for solar energy because storage and circulation are already included," says Ford.

"But the swimming pool application is just a stepping stone. The next step is home heating and cooling, which is far more difficult."

The main obstacle to complete use of solar energy in home heating and cooling is the relative inefficiency of present solar heat collectors.

Klaus Heinemann, a research physicist, has installed a solar heating system in his Sunnyvale home. He concedes that it is not perfect.

"There are just a lot of little engineering details that need to be figured out," says Heinemann, who works with a group called Alton Associates which has concentrated on adding solar systems to existing homes.

In Palm Springs, the Desert Water Agency plans to submit an application for a grant of about $900,000 "seed money" from the federal Energy Research and Development Administration (ERDA) for the water-pumping project.

The agency also will put up about $85,000 to $100,000 in land, labor and money for the project which ultimately calls for solar cells to produce enough electricity to power a 10-horsepower motor pumping water from a depth of 250 feet.

Unlike collectors, solar, or photovoltaic, cells are hugely expensive. It costs from $5,000 to $20,000 to generate a kilowatt of electricity with them. It is $200 to $1,000 for nuclear plants and $100 to $300 a kilowatt for fossil-fuel plants.

CC seeks resident opinions

SAN RAMON — Contra Costa County residents' help is being sought in deciding how mental health programs are planned and funded.

Last year, more than 300 county residents worked on none task forces to build the county's 1975-76 mental health services plan. Planning is now underway for the next fiscal year.

The advisory boards for alcoholism, drug abuse and developmental disabilities have also formed task forces in those areas.

Anyone interested in becoming a task force member may call Ron Meier, mental health planner, 372-4383
